

1. Where to Have Your Bar Mitzvah Disco

Have your “happening” wherever people wanna be. Your favorite bar, your favorite YMCA gym, the best restaurant you can get an all you can eat buffet. Its not the PLACE where you have it that’s important, it’s the people who come and the checks they bring to you that really matter.

2. How to choose a theme that reflects who I am as an individual?

Your theme is the physical representation of your Chi. And your Chi is... something Asian people came up with. But your theme doesn’t have to be Asian... For example, here’s Enrique’s top 10 gay themes of all time:

10. Broadway – Enjoy a “Phantom of the Bar Mitzvah”
9. The Color Purple (either based on the Spielberg movie or a literal celebration of the color Purple)
8. Shopping – Tables named after the gayest stores like Geoffrey’s, Banana Republic, Club Monaco...
7. Color Me Badd (an homage to the early 90s music group) with eyebrow plucking stations and hair relaxing stations.
6. “Sparticus” or any general Greek theme “I am Larry Levy, I AM Larry Levy, I am Larry Levy...”
5. Chrystal Meth theme – everyone gets a few baggies of Meth, 30 condoms and a Paul Okenfold record. Everyone does the Glory Hole Hora... Enrique does not condone this theme, a little reefer grass never hurt anyone, though...
4. Body Sculpting – people get copies of Men’s Health and energy bars
3. Judy Garland – parting gifts include tons of painkillers and bottles of rail vodka and a black dog named ToTo.
2. Having Rip Taylor and his confetti wrangler at your bar mitzvah
1. Madonna – Post Vogue Pre-snobby Brit...

3. How should I invite guests?

When sending an invitation to your faux mitzvah take some chances but keep it simple. DON'T USE EVITE! EVITE is for pussies with uninspired day jobs. Script fonts are great, Comic Sans is totally unacceptable. Make sure to include your theme for the party so people can come dressed accordingly. And please, PLEASE, let people know who its from. After all, if they don't know your first name, they will have no idea who to make the bar mitzvah present check out to.

4. How should I dress and make sure I Fit in?

Velvet, taffeta, shoulder pads, ruffles, Benetton rugby shirts, satin, silk, asymmetric hems, leather ties etc. breath freshener, a survey of appropriate after shaves and perfumes (Old Spice, Drakar, COOL WATER and Charlie)

5. What food shall I serve?

The key to any great bar mitzvah buffet is the following: Any food you enjoy normal sized, tastes that much better miniature-ized. Hot Dogs are good, Pigs in a Blanket are perfect. Pizza's great for a pizza party but Pizza bagels are perfect for bar mitzvahs, hamburgers you can get at McDonalds, mini-hamburgers you can get at bar mitzvahs (and white castle... shh...)

- Here's what to serve:
- Pigs in a Blanket
- Pizza Bagels
- Smoked Fish with pimentos spelling out your name (Tiffany, Corey)
- Cakes made in your own image or in the spirit of your theme

6. What drinks shall I mix - a regrettable cocktail guide

In their day, many of these Bar Mitzvah only concoctions were naughtiness personified. This illustrated bar guide will allow you to re-visit such delicacies as:

Bloody Moshe (White wine, coke, and rum)

Screw Drivers = A glass filled with actual screwdrivers. Text: Just Kidding!! A Screwdriver is Orange Juice and Vodka mixed together.

The (wo)manchevitz - peach schnapps or Malibu and orange juice (for the ladies)

Suicides (sprite and coke mixed)

the Whitehead (a white Russian)

the Anti-shevitz (Pabst Blue Ribbon's)

7. How do I Decorate in an Appropriate Fashion?

Here are a few things you can do with paper mache and crepe thanks to 1980's décor legend Terrence (pronounced Teh-Rance) DelVecchio "decorator to the starz":

Hello!!!! Tis I, the immeasurable decorating talent otherwise known as Terrence DelVecchio. I've designed parties for the best and brightest (Terri Garr, Bella Lugosi) and now I wanna help you make your faux mitzvah perrrrrrrrrrfect.

-First things first, I have six words for you: CREPE PAPER, CREPE PAPER, CREPE PAPER.

There are two things I cannot live without: Tom Selleck and Crepe Paper.

- Second, you must have glitter. Body Glitter, painting glitter etc... so the world can see you sparkle and shine the superstar you know you are.

- Third, no bar mitzvah is a real party unless you've got a sign in board. Make it YOUR OWN. OWN IT. Base it on your theme and then use pictures of you and your loved ones to surround it. Do it on a thick piece of Poster board and attach a marker for your friends to write the beautiful things they clearly feel about you, YOU ABSOLUTE SSSSSUPERSTAR!

- Fourth, your centerpieces are your temple. Don't desecrate your temple or G-d will smite you down and make you shop at Payless for the rest of your life. Your centerpieces can be simple but they must shine re: glitter. And make them clever. If your theme is Broadway, make the table for your out-of-town guests Oklahoma and your sexiest friends should sit at "Guys and Dolls" put the Italians at Grease.
